Jacinda Ardern: If I could distill it down into one concept that we are pursuing in New Zealand, it is simple and it is this: kindness.

Donald Trump: America is governed by Americans. We reject the ideology of globalism and we embrace the doctrine of patriotism.

Jacinda Ardern: In the face of isolationism, protectionism, racism, the simple concept of looking outwardly and beyond ourselves, of kindness and collectivism might just be as good a starting point as any. So let's start here with the institutions that have served us well in times of need and will do so again.

Donald Trump: We withdrew from the Human Rights Council and we will not return until real reform is enacted. For similar reasons, the United States will provide no support and recognition to the International Criminal Court. As far as America is concerned, the ICC has no jurisdiction, no legitimacy and no authority.

Jacinda Ardern: New Zealand remains committed to continue to do our part to building and sustaining international peace and security, to promoting and defending an open, inclusive and rules-based international order based on universal values, to being pragmatic, empathetic, strong and kind.

Donald Trump: The United States is the world's largest giver in the world, by far, of foreign aid but few give anything to us.
